Specialty Crop Growers Secure Pivotal House Victory as Pressure Mounts on Senate

Following the House passage of H.R. 7567, industry organizations are urgently calling on the Senate to swiftly approve the bipartisan farm bill to provide vital economic stability and competitive investments for American family farms.

With the clock ticking on economic stability for American growers, the Specialty Crop Farm Bill Alliance and other industry organizations are calling on the Senate to capitalize on yesterday's House passage of H.R. 7567, arguing that family farms cannot survive another year of legislative gridlock. SCFBA issued a statement following the House passage that applauded the move and singled out congressman Glenn Thompson for his push to get a farm bill passed.

"The Specialty Crop Farm Bill Alliance commends House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thompson for his leadership and perseverance, and we thank the House for advancing H.R. 7567, marking a pivotal step forward for American agriculture," the statement reads. "This bill includes key bipartisan provisions that would strengthen the competitiveness of family farms producing specialty crops across the nation.

"As specialty crop producers face urgent and unprecedented economic pressures, enacting a comprehensive five-year farm bill is vital to their sustainability and to the communities they serve," the statement continues. "We strongly urge the Senate to act swiftly so that a bipartisan farm bill can get through conference and to the president's desk this year. American specialty crop growers cannot afford further delay."
