Why industry leaders say Florida citrus is on track for a better year

Florida citrus volume will be up this year, and industry leaders were pleased with the outlook in mid-November. “Our volume is definitely up this year,” said Steven Callaham, CEO of Dundee Citrus Growers Association. Citrus groves have avoided damaging hurricanes, and the weather has been cooperating with growers, he said.

“We have an uptick in volume, and fruit quality is looking very good this year,” he said. Packing of Florida citrus started in mid-October, said Derek Rodgers, director of sales and marketing with Florida Classic Growers, which is owned by Dundee Citrus Growers Association and is the exclusive marketer of the Florida Classic label. “Movement has been good, and prices have been good,” he said. “Quality has been excellent, and we’re seeing that flow through at the store level, which has been great.”
