Hot Dates: Joolies Drives 28.9% Growth, Claims No. 2 Spot Nationwide

Driven by a 50% boost in crop volume and rapid retail expansion, the brand is outperforming overall category growth nearly three-to-one.

For decades, it seemed dates were an old-school staple waiting for a modern makeover. Today, driven by surging household penetration and category-defining product innovations, the ancient fruit is undergoing a full-scale retail renaissance. One of the companies leading that charge is Joolies, a brand that has leveraged a quarter-century of growing expertise to nearly double its retail presence from 7,000 to over 12,000 stores heading into the 2026-27 season.

Backed by a 50% boost in crop volume and strict quality control through its sister company, Desert Valley Date, Joolies isn't just scaling up to meet demand; it is strategically aiming to reshape how retailers view date fruit velocity, product diversification and supply chain reliability.

"We've grown quickly, but we've been really intentional about growing smart," says Amanda Sains, vice president of marketing for Joolies. "Having roughly 50% more fruit this season puts us in a great position to support our expanding retail footprint, continue growing with our existing partners and still have room for what's next." The date category continues to gain household adoption, with U.S. household penetration reaching nearly 12% in 2025, according to Circana. Joolies says it's outpacing that momentum.
